Background

This curriculum introduces the coaching approach to supervision as it is used in settings with elders. It is designed to develop coaching skills in supervisors of workers who assist elders in housing and community-based services organizations. With its focus on communication and problem solving, the curriculum is useful to all kinds of supervisors from housekeeping to nursing as well as dining services to administrative.

With the population of those age 60 and over in Georgia continuing to grow, a well-trained and sustained workforce is critical. Supervisors face challenging work situations every day. Their jobs require independent thinking and decision making along with the ability to juggle competing priorities and to respond to the urgent needs of both consumers and the workers who support them.

This curriculum provides supervisors an innovative and highly effective approach to supervising and mentoring staff. This approach to supervision centers on building relationships with supervisees, constructively presenting and addressing problems, and helping workers develop problem-solving skills. When implemented successfully, a coaching approach to supervision results in increased worker satisfaction and retention as well as improved quality of care.

This training is based on curriculum from the Paraprofessional Healthcare Institute and is funded by a grant from Healthcare Research, Inc.

Who Should Attend

This curriculum is designed specifically for supervisors working in housing and community based services organizations serving older Georgians. The focus of the training is on worker retention and improvement of work performance.

Presenters

Mary Arthur

Mary has worked for more than 30 years in health care, with her focus in the field of aging. She is a Partner of MissionWorks Consulting and the Director of Senior Living Initiatives for Visiting Nurse | Hospice Atlanta, the largest nonprofit geriatric care management, home health and hospice provider in Georgia.

Through her career, Mary has been a chief operating officer, an executive director, a licensed nursing home administrator, trainer, consultant, speaker, and advocate. She believes strongly that people who work in the aging services field in any capacity do so because they want to make a difference in people's lives. Her career has been devoted primarily to working with nonprofit organizations whose culture, mission, and core values recognize and value this in their employees. Mary earned a BA in religion from Queens College in 1973 and a master's degree in social work from the University of Georgia in 1977.

Walter Coffey

Walter has been working with seniors since 1985 in various settings. Currently he is the President/CEO of Aging Services of Georgia (formerly Georgia Association of Homes & Services for the Aging - GAHSA) and the Georgia Institute on Aging. Before coming to Aging Services of Georgia, he served as a Minister with Senior Adults as well as held leadership positions throughout the aging network including adult day services, assisted and retirement living. Walter is a Certified Association Executive through the American Society of Association Executives, a Retirement Housing Professional through the University of North Texas and holds three masters degrees, the latest in Public Administration with concentration in gerontology. In addition to developing and leading training programs, he has presented workshops at state, regional and national conferences. Walter has provided leadership to various boards, task forces, committees and study groups to develop programs, regulations and legislation that positively affect the lives of older Americans.
